Reminder to Staff Regarding Political & Union Material

Late yesterday afternoon Brisbane City Council Management flooded workplaces with a letter declaring that bus drivers could be disciplined for receiving, distributing or displaying of political (and Union) material. This is directly related to a campaign which is now impacting on the State Government against the proposed privatisation of the Brisbane bus operations. The RTBU State Secretary, Owen Doogan, said, "the RTBU campaign appears to be hurting the Government when their LNP colleagues in Council determines to take such outrageous steps to intimidate ordinary bus drivers".

It is even more bizarre for an employer to do this when any such action would be in breach of Government's own legislation namely the Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 as well as the Federal Anti-Discrimination Legislation. Owen Doogan, said "our members will not be intimidated by this action and we call upon the Queensland Government and their colleagues in Brisbane City Council to abide by their own legislation and stop bullying workers when campaigns are running against them".

The Costello Report provided that ideology should come first when delivering services to the Brisbane public and is seeking for the tendering out of all bus operations in Brisbane. The Transport Minister's advisors briefed the RTBU this year that it is their intention to follow through with this recommendation after the election next year.

The RTBU has commenced a campaign against these proposals in an attempt to protect jobs of approximately 2,500 bus drivers and other operations staff employed by Brisbane City Council.

Owen Doogan, said "the success of the campaign to date has been confirmed by the LNP Government and their colleagues in Brisbane City Council by the panicked attempts at intimidation of the Brisbane City Council bus drivers and other staff".

This contemptuous action is yet another example of why Queenslanders kept the LNP were in opposition for 22 years.
